

Hatch Storage

After many years of storing the hatch in almost every location imaginable I found one spot worked the best for me. I have a couple of 22qt (I think) Rubbermaid storage containers under the seats. There is a small space between the containers and the underside of the seats.

I slide the hatch in with the hinge towards the hull. I place a sponge between the halves which slightly opens the parts like a “relaxed” oyster. It slides under the seat and then opens slightly and catches on the lip so it will never come out. I’ve had the boat way over and it never came out. It frees space in the cabin and is easily accessible when I want to put the hatch back in place on short notice.
